

January 20, 2012

To: Those looking for house sitters

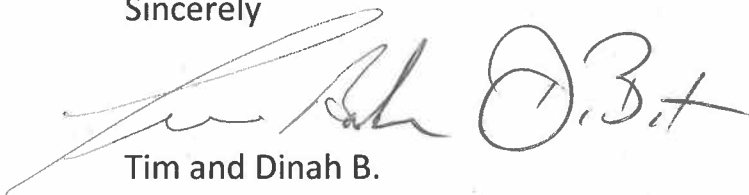

Re: Kevin and Valerie

I would think that the most important consideration when looking for a house sitter is to determine if they are trustworthy and reliable. You want to know that your home and possessions will be cared for as if you were there in the home.

We have known Kevin and Valerie for many years. They always treat others with respect. They are perhaps the most reliable people we know and have shown us that they can be trusted. They are honest in all of their dealings and take care to not knowingly wrong another person. I worked with Kevin (same employer) for several years and know that he maintains a calm demeanor and positive attitude.

Since they retired Kevin and Valerie have been traveling extensively outside of the US and have shared many great stories of people they have met along the way. Their approach to travel shows above average adaptability and flexibility. No doubt these traits are of benefit for house sitting as well. Finally, we have traveled with Kevin and Valerie on several multi day trips wherein we stayed in vacation rental homes managed by the homeowners. In all of our travels, they have demonstrated complete respect for the properties in which we stayed. You will be pleased if you select them to look after your home.

Sincerely

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Tim and Dinah B.", is written over a printed name. The signature is fluid and somewhat stylized, with a large loop at the end.

Tim and Dinah B.

Torrance, CA